DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Feng et al. in view of Okoshi.

Re: claim 1, Feng et al. show a disk brake for a bicycle, as in the present invention, comprising: a body 150, a lever 20 pivotally mounted on the body; and a driving device B mounted in the body and comprising a driving member 90 rotatably mounted in the body and connected to and actuated by the lever; a driven member 110 reciprocally received in the body and connected to and actuated by the driving member; two brake pads 140 mounted in the body and one of the brake pads connected to the driven member; a ball bearing 80 with multiple balls mounted in the body and around the driving member. Feng et al. show ball bearing 80 to be a thrust bearing but lack the two washers having two concave raceways. Okoshi teaches a thrust bearing in figure 3 wherein the thrust ball bearing comprises two washers 1, 2 placing the ball bearing 3 between the washers, and each washer having a contact side facing to each other and an annular groove with a concave bottom defined in the contact side to completely contacting with the balls to receive the balls 3 of the ball bearing in cooperation with the groove in the other washer. Okoshi further teaches the use of thrust ball bearings to reduce friction in rotating equipments in column 1, lines 5-12. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified Feng's brake to comprise a thrust ball bearing as taught by Okoshi since the structure of Okoshi's thrust ball bearing which comprises two washers with concave raceways to receive the balls is known for its excellence performance in reducing friction in rotating equipments for a smooth operation as taught by Okoshi.

Re: claim 2, Okoshi further shows an annular ball holder, not numbered, for the balls 3 of the ball bearing being rotatably mounted on the ball holder in figure 3.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed 5/16/05 have been fully considered. It is believed that Applicant's argument is more specific than the amended claim language in claim 1 and the amendment to the specification. Claim 1 now states "an annular groove with a concave bottom defined in the contact side to completely contacting with the balls". Figure 3 of Okoshi shows a concave bottom in an annular groove of a washer 1. The concave bottom completely contacting with the balls 3. The rejection has been slightly modified to meet the amended portion of claim 1.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

Art Unit: 3683

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
